Sen. Hillary Clinton gives tribute to ethnic media at Nam Awards

By Mike Santos / asianjournal.com

WASHINGTON D.C. – Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton opened the First New American Media Awards last November 14 at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington D.C., with a powerful tribute to ethnic media and their role in American society.

"A new wind is blowing and the new media would be part of the change here in our country which we so desperately need," said Clinton.

"Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are among the reasons why our nation has been blessed for so long. What’s great about America is that every generation brings more voices to the conversation," she added.

"Ethnic media represents the way new Washington needs to connect to the new America,” added Clinton.

Clinton said that the power of the guest list of the ethnic media versions of the Pulitzer. Also on the guest list were Washington Post Executive Editor Len Downie, FCC Commissioner Michael J. Copps, District of Columbia Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton, California Congresswoman Mike Honda, California Congresswoman Barbara Lee, and California Endowment Vice President for Communications and Public Affairs Dennis Ross. NBC News anchor Pat Lawton also served as the evening’s emcee.

"Ethnic media has come to Washington. Our challenge here is about making mainstream media more ethnic and ethnic media more mainstream,” said New American Media Executive Director Sandy Close.

Close to 600 ethnic media practitioners competed in 14 categories for recognition in 19 categories, ranging from Investigative Journalism to Best Community Talk Show.

More than 50 judges, primarily from universities, mainstream media and community-based organizations, came together via teleconference to judge the entries.

WASHINGTON, D.C.- Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton (D-NY) paid tribute to the ethnic media and their role in America as she opened the First New American Media Awards November 14 at the Mayflower Hotel here.

"A new wind is blowing and the new media would be part of the change here in our country which we so desperately need," said Clinton.

"Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are among the reasons why our nation has been blessed for so long. What's great about America is that every generation brings more voices to the debate and that is what you are doing," said Clinton. "Ethnic media represent the way new Washington needs to connect to the new America," added Clinton.

Clinton headed the powerhouse guest list of the ethnic media's version of the Pulitzer. Also in the guest list were Washington Post Executive Editor Len Downie, FCC Commissioner Michael J. Copps, District of Columbia Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton, California Congressman Mike Honda, California Congresswoman Barbara Lee, Seattle Club Executive director Carl Pope, and California Lieutenant Governor and Public Affairs Dennis Hunt. NBC Channel 4 News anchor Pat Lawton Mass served as the evening's emcee.

"Ethnic media has come to Washington. Our challenge here is about making mainstream media more ethnic and ethnic media more mainstream," said New American Media Executive Director Sandy Close.

Close to 600 ethnic media practitioners competed in 14 categories for recognition in 19 categories, ranging from investigative Journalism to Best Community Talk Show.

More than 50 judges nationwide, from universities, mainstream media and community based organizations, came together via teleconference to judge the entries over one week.

Twenty-three first place awards and a cash prize of $1000 were given out to ethnic media journalists and firms from across the country.

Washington Post's Len Downie remarked on the youthfulness and diversity of the honorees saying that ethnic media is a force in American journalism that will energize all of us.

The New American Media is the country's first and largest national cooperation of ethnic news organizations. Founded by the non-profit Pacific News Service in 1995, NAM is headquartered in California, where ethnic media are the primary source of news and information for over half of the state's new ethnic majority. Young Gaza Journalist Wins New American Ethnic Media Award

Palestinian Journalist Mohammed Omer Wins Recognition for Telling the Story of an Israeli Incursion

BBSNews 2006-11-13 -- Events in the Gaza Strip are usually somber and involve funeral processions and lament over attacks from Israel. That invariably kill and injure many innocent civilians who have nothing to do with terrorism; one bright spot has happened recently, young photo journalist Mohammed Omer has won the first annual National Ethnic Media Award for Best Youth Voice.

New America was formed in 1996 to bring together ethnic voices from around the United States and the world. Mohammed won for his article entitled "Sharon, Why Did You Destroy My House? Operation Rainbow A Year Later" - a piece that painstakingly described an Israeli incursion into occupied Palestine in May of 2004 that could very well have been written about Eilat Hourani (see "Gaza: Where is the American and Brittish Presence?" 2006-11-10).

In the winning piece Mohammed wrote in part about the 2004 "Operation Rainbow":

"Israeli snipers commanded tower houses and took up positions on rooftops, shooting anything and anyone who moved, even killing two teenagers whose "hostile activity" consisted of taking laundry off a clothesline and feeding pet doves. All the while, the shells from the Apache helicopters turned its victims into scattered body parts. As the week wore on, people ran out of food, water and medicine. Ambulances were slowed down by Israeli fire and could not reach the injured. The morgue in Al Azarije hospital was overflowing and, when one could venture outside to bury their dead, a commercial refrigerator that usually stored vegetables was pressed into service to hold corpses.

The ceaseless din of explosions and gunfire couldn't drown out the human chorus of despair—children crying for a place of bread, for a cup of milk, for a drop of water, the lamentation of parents who had nothing to give them, the wails of the newly widowed and orphaned, the screams of the dying and disabled. But sometimes there was only stunned, disbelieving silence, as friends and relatives tried to identify their loved ones from scattered body parts—a leg, an arm, a piece of a torso—that was all the ambulances doctors could gather.

We asked Mohammed by email some questions about how the award may help inspire other Palestinians to enter journalism and help get out the story from Palestine:

BBSNews: "Will an award like this help other Palestinian photographers and writers in the future to keep striving for journalistic recognition?"

Omer: "Yes, I do agree that this award will give the youth hope to continue working and show the world to the outside world! As this is an important thing to do for the Palestinian community."

BBSNews: "What would you like to see happen more from other journalists and media covering issues in Occupied Palestine?"

Omer: "I would like to see more about daily life in Palestine, that the journalists go in depth and focus on the daily life of people, visits their homes, what they eat, how they live and what they see and record their memories."
